King Council in Session

At a meeting of the councilors of King Municipality, held last Thursday at the home of Rudolph Johnson, one of the councilors gave notice that at the next meeting he would bring in a resolution reducing the time of operation of the pound law to eight months in the year. At present it is in force all the year round. This has been a feeling among some ever since the law was passed some eighteen months ago, that eight months a year was sufficient to protect the crops. This feeling has spread lately, so that it probably will be put to a vote of the municipality at the time of the regular election in December.

The councilors also have arranged for a public meeting of the voters of the municipality, to be held in Rainy Valley schools on Thursday 28. At this meeting the affairs of King will be gone over by the council and opportunity will be given to all for a full and free discussion of public matters.

It is possible that a representative of the Department of Municipal Affairs of Edmonton will be present.

Coming to Alberta

A party of men representing a large number of Pennsylvania farmers, are expected to arrive here Friday and remain for a couple of days' visit with their friends, E. G. Gish and family. The party expect to go on from here to Brooks or Bassano, with a view of looking over the C.P.R. irrigated lands.

If satisfied with what they see they probably will arrange for the purchase of a tract, and together with a large number of their friends will move from Pennsylvania to Alberta in the spring.

N. E. Stuart is getting two cars of extra fine potatoes from New Brunswick, which will arrive about November 15th. They will be worth $1 per bushel. Place your order now.

At a field day held by the Calgary Normal School last week Miss Ruth Derr, of Carlstadt, won first prize in the ladies ball throwing contest and second in the potato race.

A masquerade ball will be given by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Suffield on Friday October 30th, 1914, at Suffield Hall. Proceeds to be given to Canadian Patriotic Fund. Good Music. Everybody come and have a good time.

Pioneer Dies of Heart Failure

Everyone in the country north of Carlstadt who ever has had occasion to travel east toward Empress, knows the Dart family, who live in township 21-4. For years the only residents of the entire township, their home has been well known as a stop-over place to hundreds, and all have a good word for the hospitality greeting them.

So it was with much sorrow that the word was received here last week of the decease of Mrs. Dart from heart failure. She had been a sufferer from this in a more or less marked degree for years.

She is survived by her husband, three sons and two daughters: Jay of Bountiful, Sask.; Guy, of Barons, Alta.; Bert, residing at home; Mrs. Emma Graham, of Shelby Jct. Montana; and Miss May, of Edmonton College.

Burial was made in the family cemetery.

Mrs. Dart's life has been that of a pioneer. Born in Wisconsin fifty three years ago, in the early years of that state, she moved to the newest part of Dakota soon after marriage. When that country began to settle, Mr. and Mrs. Dart took up their residence in the western Canada, being among the first white settlers to locate near Empress, Alberta. There they lived for a number of years, improving a farm and getting a nice home. But the call of the frontier was too strong and several years ago, the family moved to their present home.

There is a railway line near now, but for years there were seventy five miles from Carlstadt, the nearest railroad town of any size. There they lived, content with one another and "the common round, the daily task," seeing few except an occasional traveler across the prairie. Truly, they were pioneers.

Loan Co. Inspector Pleased

J. C. Murray, Inspector of the Credit Foncier Loan company, of Edmonton, was in this district last week, looking after the interests of his company. When questioned by a news reporter, Mr. Murray said that his company would be making no further loans in this district at the present. "In fact," he stated, "We are making no further loans anywhere, as most of our money came from France and that source of supply is now cut off. You can say if you wish that I have found the company's business in this district to be in a very satisfactory condition."

Hard Times Dance Enjoyed

Hard times in Carlstadt: range all the way from rags to diamonds, if one could judge by the raincoat worn at the last dance given in the Adams hall last Thursday evening by the ladies of St. Mary's church. A few costumes really showed the sting of poverty, one such being that of A. J. Theroux. A. C. Hughes Terrible Teddy costume also was very striking. Music was furnished by Meadman, F. J. Basken, O. J. Wood and W. M. Cotter, piano; Mr. and Mrs. Hegy, and H. S. Ketchum, mandolins; L. Tammeros, violin; and Chas. Derr, mandocello. $16 was cleared by the ladies.

Value of Ready Cash

A fair sized crowd of buyers attended the sale of chattels of the Development Company's farm last Saturday afternoon in Carlstadt. Considering the times, the horses sold medium well, but the machinery was almost given away. Many bargains were picked up by those who had a little ready cash. W. H. Johnson, bailiff, was auctioneer.

All told the sale amounted to $733.00.

He Threatened to Shoot

Thirty days hard labor was given to the Austrian, Pete Czokanski, of Tide Lake, who was brought up for trial last Friday in the local court charged with threatening a neighbor with a gun. On the other charge of killing the neighbors pig Czokanski will face trial when he finishes this term. Inspector Shorebotham, of Medicine Hat, and C. H. Wagner, J. P., of Carlstadt, were the magistrates, and constables Thompson and Hoe were the police concerned.

Uncovered

A well known surgeon was imparting some clinical instruction to half a dozen students who accompanied him to the lecture.

Pausing at the bedside of a doubtful case, he said:

"Would you say, do you think this is or is not a case for operation?"

One by one the students made their diagnosis, and all came to the conclusion that it was not.

"Well, gentlemen, you are all wrong," said the surgeon, "I will operate, and I shall operate tomorrow."

"No, you are not," exclaimed the patient, "I can see in your eyes that to one is a good majority. Gimme my clothes,"—London Tit-Bits.

Seemed All Right

"Man, why don't you want me to play with the girls?" he asked. "Because, dear, I know the family. He hasn't good 'blood' in him."

"Well, gentlemen, you are all wrong," said the surgeon, "I will operate, and I won't have to do it twice."

Style in Print

Women inmates of the workhouse and the poor houses of New York will no longer have to wear dresses made of bedding. Commissaries are to provide gowns from Paris, but there's going to be the most style, and the girls will be the prettiest. The women prisoners take more interest in themselves and in life generally.

CANADA
The last of the fair grounds are stretched out for a wide smile. From where the wide Atlantic rolls. To the calm Pacific sides. And the hills of all the plains. Are doing their best. To help the further the Country's gains. Thousands are coming across the sea. To prairie, ranch and town. Making a look was their own. To a country of great renown. They are people of every nation. And have come, to see to see. That have come to see. And to have the way. For the power of the old flag.

There is work for the masses of unem-

"I wish I had been Billy Smith."

"Why, Freddie, said his astonished mother, "you are with one of the nice things have. You doesn't get any pocket money, and I know you have had as sizeable as his father never buys him present."

"I know all about that, mamma," said Freddie, "but—"

"I wish I had a nice books you have. And you never have to go to the cold and wet to carry paper."

"I know," grumbled Freddie, annoyed by his mother's strange lack of understanding.

"But Billy can wiggle his ears!"

"This political pie—" said the disappointed office-seeker, sadly.

"It isn't anything like the kind our father used to make."

IN A REBEL'S GRAVE

TOMB OF AMERRY GIROD IS IN HEART OF MONTREAL.

Where Sherbrooke Street Crosses St. Lawrence in the Busiest Part of the Commercial Metropolis, the Burial Place of the Swashbuckler, Where Rebellion Was Crushed '76

Was Anerry Girod

This story tells of the tragic end of a remarkable man whose remains have mouldered into dust in the strangest grave ever dug on the island of Montreal. It is the grave of the swashbuckler, Amerry Girod, who, though the ouglafours of the Montreal of to-day are Sherbrooke street running through the heart of the financial quarter, and St. Lawrence street, which, running in from the country to the north, cuts the city in two and crosses Sherbrooke street at right angles. Beneath the paved surface of the streets, the grave of this remarkable man, who played the game of rebellion and lost, lies buried, and will remain buried, according to the custom of the time, at this cross-road. Seventy-five years ago, when the battle of the burial took place, and the traffic of a great city passed over the grave, the man who dug it has long since been forgotten, but the story of the closing scene of his chequered career can still be told.

Amerry Girod

His name was Amerry Girod, and he died in 1827, or ten years before the breaking out of what is commonly called the Papineau rebellion. No one knows now precisely where he was born. By some his birth-place was in Switzerland, by others in the Tyrol, and by others in the part of France, now part of Germany. He claimed to have passed his youth at a Swiss castle, and subsequently to have served as an officer of cavalry in Mexico. He was a man of great energy, and spoke only English and French, but German, Italian, and Spanish as well. He seems to have been a soldier of fortune.

Coming to Quebec, he became the friend of Mr. Perrault, a property owner of the district, who placed him on one of his properties to establish a model farm. The rent he had to pay was heavy, debts which Mr. Perrault had to pay, and the ingratitude of the man who became his friend.

Girod then moved to Varennes, on the south side of the St. Lawrence, and only a few miles below Montreal. There he found favor with one of the greatest men of the time, Mr. Papineau, a great supporter of Papineau. At Varennes Girod married Dr. Duchesne, a daughter of the Abbé of St. Aime, Superior of St. Therese, and from that time the adventures lived on the property of Mr. Papineau, and drew him more and more into the west of Montreal, which was crushed at St. Eustache, on December 31, 1837.

One of the earliest overt acts of that agitation, or rebellion, in which he was engaged, but which he followed the fortunes of Girod through the bloodiest chapter of the drama, was the capture of the fort at the west of the west of Montreal, which was crushed at St. Eustache, on December 31, 1837.

The Canadian historians have made the hero of the uprising, Girod was practically the general in chief, and the priests to leave the village, and he practically detained them several days as prisoners. He then made his way to the bridge at St. Rose, and his men succeeded in making the bridge impassable, but he was unable to prevent the Indians to give up the Indians in their possession and their two sons in their possession. The Indians were told that the Indians had no such determination to prevent any attempt to remove their property that Girod and his compatriots departed without their property.

During the two weeks of turmoil that preceded the battle, Girod was one of the principal agitators. At times he seems to have dominated the situation, and to have incited for the rebels. Dr. Chomedey, whose

The Indians were told that the Indians had no such determination to prevent any attempt to remove their property that Girod and his compatriots departed without their property.

On the following day the force reached the fort at the west of the west of Montreal, the artillery opening fire upon the church. The battle last all day, and the swashbuckler, Amerry Girod, was found, when the insurgents surrendered to have gone to the fort at the west of the west of Montreal.

Finding himself surrounded, Girod drew his pistol and with a blow cut his brains.

Girod's body was at once brought up and buried, and the authorities ordered that it should be buried "at what was then called Côte à Barre, in the middle of the St. Lawrence Main street and Sherbrooke street."

OLD BERLIN.

It is a Terrible Contrast to Much Lived New City.

With 600,000 of the 2,500,000 population of the Kaiser's capital crowded into one-room dwellings at the rate of twenty persons to the square yard, the authorities of Berlin are seriously concerned with the problem that has arisen. The result of the building in Berlin, it has not kept pace with the growth of the city, and most entirely confined to the better residence section of West Berlin.

Berlin is a large city without tenements. It is indisputably the most modern city in Europe. The authorities readily concede that the artistic exteriors of the blocks and blocks of houses, their cleanliness of the streets, have not been exaggerated. Sociology, however, is not a model, particularly in America.

And so it is. Probably in no older city is there a street literally "scrubbed" daily. Electrically propelled water-wagons with rotary thin wire brushes pass over the streets, and dirt may have been left by the big rotary brushes.

Following the combined water and scrub wagons come men with scrubbing mops with rubber soles similar to those used by window cleaners. These they push along before the water-wagons, and the dirt which may have been left by the big rotary brushes.

But this so-called "new Berlin" is the result of the very progressive municipal administration under the present Emperor. It is the Berlin authorities who have the same to say of the city which the sociologists see and praise. There is another Berlin which comparatively few sociologists do not know.

Across the river on the east and the south of the city is the "old Berlin" of Frederick the Great. There the Berlin authorities have the same to say of the city which the sociologists see and praise. There is another Berlin which comparatively few sociologists do not know.

There are some 8,000 to 10,000 flats, mostly in the old town, in "old Berlin." In old Berlin as high as a thirteenth persons have been found to live in one room. The construction of modern flat buildings has been carried on to the new town, and they have been built in great numbers.

Fairly moderate as the rentals, ranging from $20 to $60 for three to four persons, are the rents which are considered by Americans no German workman, street car or railroad employee, can afford to pay $30 a month, can pay such rents.

Accompanied by a physician, the author visited a part of the old town on the north side. It was noon, but no one would suspect it in the dark, lighted rooms, in which while we stepped. On a very soiled bed of rags was a woman and a young girl.

The rooms were kitchen, dining room, sleeping room and living room. The family consisted of the husband, wife, four children, the oldest girl being sixteen. At night two young men, whom they rented sleeping space on the floor.

On the second street we came to a place in the second court back of one room and a tiny kitchen. They were occupied by a man and wife and eight children. There were three beds for the ten. There was no heat.

The two windows on the floor were covered against the cold. Moisture ran down the walls. These two places were typical of the old town.

The death rate is very high from these sections of the city. Privilege and morality is impossible.

A proposition will be laid before the Diet to appropriate at least $1,000,000 for the building of flats at a rate within reach of the working man.

Just How He Felt.

Mr. Meekins was habitually all that a first-class man should be. He was impulsive, a doer, came when the world turned at last and spoke his mind freely to the world. He was a man of the world, a man of leadership. Mrs. M. stood against him and remained on the side of the world.

"Why, you'd regret those words if you should suddenly lose your wife."

"Oh, I don't want to lose her," came the cheerful retort, "but there are times when you are very much to miles, her for a few hours."

The Turkish Bride.

The Turkish bride spends about a week in dancing and wild, happy life before her marriage. Then when the wedding comes, she is a bride who kisses his hands and feet. She goes to the groom's home and on his arrival she is a bride who is a bride with which her face has been daubed in the week of dancing and frivolity with her husband—and they are happy ever after.

His First Intimation.

"How did you find out you could draw in the admiration of the celebrated Illustrated."

"By the marks I received in school for the exactness and fidelity of my drawings. I received the marks out of my work was a caricature of my beloved teacher on the blackboard, and the marks came from the teacher's cane."

Disappointed.

"I dreamt last night that I went to your funeral."

"And that is why you are looking so glum."

"Yes—because it was a dream."

Team Work.

"How do Jack and Joanne ever manage to scrape a living?"

"Why, he makes the money first,

DESERTERS

ARTEMUS WARD, the famous American humorist, whose humor sometimes was a lance-thrust, once said that he was willing to sacrifice all his first wife's relatives on the altar of his country. Many a man has been willing to let others do his fighting for him—willing, also, to share the rewards of peace and victory. Men of this type belong to the deserter class.

In Canada are thousands of business firms striving with all their might to make better times for themselves and their communities. To them all honor.

But there are other firms—those who have much at stake—who are "standing pat," "playing safe," doing absolutely nothing to build up business. They are mere lookers on, not participants in the valorous struggle of their brethren to establish and maintain good times.

Look about you and you will find in the advertising columns of this and other newspapers many messages from firms with a sturdy confidence in the future.

Buy an Irrigated Farm
FROM THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

BECAUSE

Irrigation makes the farmer independent of rainfall and insures good crops, not occasionally, but every year.

Irrigation makes possible the successful culture of alfalfa, the king of fodders, which insures best returns in dairying and mixed farming.

Irrigation means intensive farming and close settlement with all the advantages of a densely populated agricultural community.

Irrigation in the Canadian Pacific Railway Irrigation Block is no longer an experiment, the year 1914 having absolutely demonstrated its success wherever intelligently applied.

You can buy irrigated land from the Canadian Pacific Railway at prices ranging from $35 to $75 per acre, with twenty years' to pay and the privilege of a loan of $2,000.00 for improvements (6% interest); no principal payment at the end of first and second years and no water rental for first year. Assistance is also given in supplying stock in approved instances.

This is the most liberal offer of irrigated farm land on record.

Oil Lease Time Extended

The Dominion government has decided to extend all oil and gas leases for one year. The leases in the ordinary course are renewable every twelve months, but under prevailing conditions it has been thought desirable to give the holders of leases an extension of twelve months.

Live and Learn

As in all Western districts, many who are farming around Carlstadt, are men who came from the East and are having their first experience with dry farming. They have found in past years that methods ordinarily successful in a wet country will not do here and so were undecided just what to do. Those of this class who have been away threshing in Saskatchewan have gained valuable information. They have learned how to carry on dry farming successfully and these methods, put into practice here, should be of great value to our farmers.

Schools to be Kept Open

Among the legislation passed by the Alberta parliament was an Act to keep the schools in southern Alberta districts where drought has prevented the tax payers from meeting their obligations. The government will loan the school districts sufficient money to keep the schools open. Another law passed puts a tax on all the unused lands of the province, where the owners live more than nine miles distant.

A Surprise

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Thornton were very pleasantly surprised Tuesday evening, when about a dozen friends dropped in on them, bringing baskets of lunch, and games and proceeded to enjoy themselves. But, though very much surprised, Mr. and Mrs. Thornton were equal to the occasion and warmly welcomed the merry company. Needless to say, a most enjoyable evening was spent. The present were: Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. McKinnon, Mrs. H. C. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. McDiarmid, Burton McDiarmid, H. S. Ketchum.

Want Irrigation

LETHBRIDGE, Alberta, October 27.—Farmers in districts in Southern Alberta who are not served by any irrigation project will appeal to the Dominion Government through the Interior, to extend irrigation to their lands.

The present season has demonstrated in a most conclusive manner the advantages of irrigation, as irrigated farms have fine crops, whereas in districts where irrigation was not available the results have been disappointing. Farmers in the districts ranging from Township 10, Range 19 to Range 26 in the south and Township 13, Range 10 to Range 26, in the north west of 4th Meridian, are not yet served by any irrigation project, but have had opportunity to see the success attained by irrigation farmers in the Canadian Pacific Railway irrigation belts. These farmers are deeply in earnest in their efforts to secure irrigation for their districts, so much so that a petition is being circulated asking the Dominion Government to proceed with installation of such a system, and the farmers express their willingness to have bonds raised on their lands to cover the cost of the system, which they will undertake to repay within 40 years.

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. McNab, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Theroux, Mrs. F. J. Basken, Mrs. W. M. Cotter, Mrs. F. C. Wooliven, Eva Woollen, Mrs. E. K. Johnson, H. W. Johnson, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wagner Wednesday evening. A very pleasant time was spent with music and conversation.
